Important remarks to GELS from William J. Clinton The former President of the United States

I believe the great challenge of this century is to move along the path of positive interdependence-creating more stability, equality, and sustainability in nations around the world.

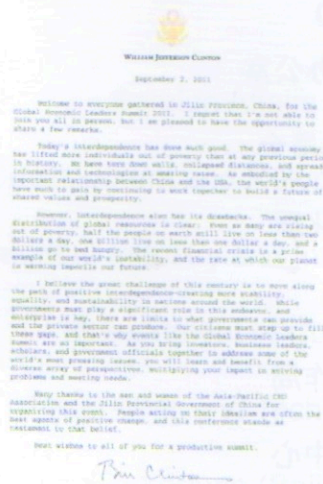

While governments must play a significant role in this endeavor, and enterprise is key, there are limits to what governments can provide and the private sector can produce.

Our citizens must step up to fill these gaps, and that's why events like the Global Economic Leaders Summit are so important.

As you bring investors, business leaders, scholars, and government officials together to address some of the world's most pressing issues, you will learn and benefit from a diverse array of perspectives, multiplying your impact in solving problems and meeting needs.

Many thanks to the men and women of the Asia-Pacific CEO Association and the Jilin provincial Government of China for organizing this event. People acting on their idealism are often the best agents of positive change, and this conference stands as testament to that belief.

Best wishes to all of you for a productive summit.

Bill Clinton The 42nd President The United States
